In her deeply moving memoir, Shauna Niequist embarks on an extraordinary journey of faith and self-discovery that takes her from the heart of her Midwestern upbringing to the teeming streets of Chicago, where she encounters a diverse community of refugees.

Guided by her grandmother's inspiring legacy of faith and compassion, Shauna delves into the hidden stories of her ancestors, uncovering their resilience, sacrifices, and unwavering hope amidst adversity. These personal narratives intertwine with her own experiences as she navigates the challenges and rewards of welcoming refugees into her life.

Through intimate encounters with families from war-torn countries like Syria, Iraq, and the Democratic Republic of Congo, Shauna confronts her own assumptions about faith, identity, and the nature of human connection. She grapples with questions of privilege, fear, and the profound responsibility of bearing witness to the suffering of others.

Written with raw honesty and a compassionate heart, "Finding Jesus Among My Ancestors And Refugee Neighbors" is a powerful testament to the transformative power of faith and the urgent need for empathy in our divided world. Shauna's deeply personal journey invites readers to re-examine their own beliefs, embrace the complexities of human experience, and strive for a more just and compassionate society.

Shauna Niequist is a #1 New York Times bestselling author, speaker, and podcaster. Her writing has been praised by Oprah Winfrey, Anne Lamott, and Elizabeth Gilbert. She is the author of several books, including "Present Over Perfect," "Savor," and "Bread & Wine." Shauna lives in Chicago with her husband and three children.
