Once upon a time, there was a little baby who was never satisfied. No matter what his parents did for him, he always found something to complain about.

If his parents gave him a bottle, he would complain that it was too cold or too warm. If they changed his diaper, he would complain that it was too wet or too dry. If they put him in a crib, he would complain that it was too hard or too soft.

The baby's parents were at their wits' end. They didn't know what to do to make him happy. They tried everything they could think of, but nothing seemed to work.

One day, the baby's parents were so frustrated that they decided to take him to the doctor. The doctor examined the baby and found nothing wrong with him. He was a perfectly healthy baby.

"I think the problem is that your baby is just discontented," the doctor said. "He's never satisfied with anything because he doesn't know how to be happy."

The doctor gave the baby's parents some advice. He told them to try to teach the baby to be content with what he had. He said to give him plenty of love and attention, and to make sure he had everything he needed.

The baby's parents took the doctor's advice to heart. They started to spend more time with the baby, playing with him and reading to him. They also made sure to give him plenty of hugs and kisses.

Slowly but surely, the baby started to change. He began to complain less and less. He started to appreciate the things that his parents did for him. And he started to be happy.

The baby's parents were so relieved. They were so happy to have their happy baby back.

The baby learned a valuable lesson that day. He learned that happiness comes from within. It doesn't come from having everything you want. It comes from being grateful for what you have.

The Discontented Little Baby is a charming and cautionary tale about the importance of contentment. It's a story that will resonate with parents and children alike.
