Now, for the first time, Red Sox manager Terry Francona tells the inside story of that historic season in his new book, The Zen of Building the Best Team in Baseball and Breaking the Curse.

In this deeply personal and inspiring book, Francona shares his insights on what it takes to build a championship team. He covers everything from player development to clubhouse dynamics to game-day strategy.

Francona's philosophy is simple: create a culture of trust and respect, and let the players play. He believes that if you give players the freedom to be themselves, they will perform at their best.

This approach worked wonders for the Red Sox. In 2004, the team had a record of 98-64, the best in the American League. They then went on to win the World Series, beating the Cardinals in four games.
